Balance sheet protection against exceptional losses

The Allianz Trade Excess of Loss policy is our response to the growing global demand to see strong credit management rewarded, while achieving balance sheet protection against exceptional credit losses.

Allianz Trade Excess of Loss is a credit risk management solution designed to help companies mitigate significant losses, therefore improving balance sheet efficiency.

The Allianz Trade Excess of Loss policy is based on our customer's existing credit management procedures and each policy is customized to meet your individual needs.

Confidence without interference: The key benefits of Allianz Trade Excess of Loss

Flexibility

Retain more independence

- A high discretionary credit limit (DCL) provides the flexibility to manage day to day credit decisions and improves the level of coverage
- Group limits allow credit limits to be dispersed between buyers within the same group

Certainty

Depend on secure and stable cover

- Cover is non-cancellable for 12 months
- Allianz AA S&P rating* provides reassurance
- This is particularly relevant in support of funding solutions under our securitisation offering

Efficiency

Enhance operational performance

- Leverage existing credit management practices
- Low policy administration
- Benefit from a reduced premium as recognition of good credit management procedures and risk sharing

Adaptability

Build a product that meets your needs

- Use your own information, tap into our worldwide database of 40+ million companies or use a combination of the two
- Data is compiled through a network of experienced credit analysts and global risk management experts
